

International Trade and Business Law Review

Call for Submissions

The Student Editorial Board of the International Trade and Business Law Review is currently seeking submissions for inclusion in Volume XXII, to be published in 2019.

About the Review

The International Trade and Business Law Review (the Review) publishes leading articles consisting of original research, case notes, comments, and book reviews concerning international trade and business law, arbitration law and comparative law. The Review endeavours to provide the legal and business communities with information reflecting recent developments in these areas; contributing to the scholarly discussion of these developments, whilst being informative and of practical relevance to scholars and professionals alike. The Review is overseen by a board of top international trade law practitioners and academics from across the globe, ensuring the relevance and quality of the material is outstanding.

Submit

Submission should be made by Wednesday 31 October 2018 in order to be considered for inclusion in Volume XXII. Submission may be up to 15,000 words long and should relate to international trade or business in some form.

Authors will be required to confirm that the submission has not yet been and will not be published elsewhere, with the Review holding the right to exclusively publish the submission.

Submissions should be in word document format and can be made directly to the email address ITBLR@curtin.edu.au or through ExpressO at <https://www.bepress.com/products/expresso/>.

If authors require any further information, they should not hesitate to contact the Student Editorial Board through ITBLR@curtin.edu.au .
